GUIDE FOR REVIEWERS

If you are invited by the editorial board, or if your suggestion for reviewing a book is granted by the editors, please comply with the spelling and design rules that are mentioned in the Guidelines for Authors.

The board strives to send a hard-copy of the book to the indicated address, accompanied by a sheet of review instructions.

Your book review should ideally not exceed a number of 1,000 words; in exceptional cases we will accept reviews of 1,500 words. In case you devote a review to a number of books in the same field of scholarly research (with a maximum of three), your review article may exceed the prescribed amount of words.

The review provides an objective and yet critical and fair discussion of the book(s) under review. The review discusses the overall idea and scope of the book, as well as the main arguments that lead up to the central thesis. In case of strong disagreement with the author's argument, the reviewer is bound to provide solid arguments against the author's thesis, and to indicate the weaker and stronger points. A balanced review will both point out areas of improvement as well as underline the book's strengths. A sheer chapter-by-chapter description is dissuaded, but permitted as long as the overall aim of the book is duly and properly addressed.

Your review is susceptible to the same terms of peer-review as any article in the journal, so that at least two referents will read the submitted peer-review. The review may either be sent back with notes for further refinement or elaboration, or accepted, or rejected in exceptional circumstances.
